

Dear Friends:

As you probably know, new distribution methods made possible by the "digital revolution" have created a number of thorny issues for media producers, distributors, and users: questions about security, copyright protection, appropriate compensation, and so on. Fanlight Productions has tried, in consultation with some of our interested customers, to develop licensing policies which will protect our rights and the interests of the filmmakers we represent, while also making it possible for the groups who use our films to continue to explore these new opportunities.
